Although mainly based in London and the South East, we have a large pool of registered social workers and social care professionals throughout Britain.

Established in 1984, Social Workline has a wealth of experience with clients from the local authority, charity, voluntary and social housing sectors.

With ISO-9001 accredited recruitment procedures and a business management system audited twice a year, and voted best agency in an NOP survey of agency workers in London, we strongly believe in the personal touch.

With up to 1,000 current workers available at any given moment, we pride ourselves on getting to know each one through an in-depth face-to-face hour long interview, so that we can more easily match their qualifications, experience and interests to your vacancies – whether they be on a temporary or permanent basis.

Social Workline's pool of workers can cover all service-user groups and are available from basic grade to manager level. We have registered social workers as well as experienced unqualified workers.

All candidates are extensively vetted and Criminal Records Bureau (CRB) checked to an enhanced level, which includes POVA and POCA clearance.

Our specialist consultants – social workers themselves – work in partnership with clients, so that we understand your needs and the way you approach your recruitment.

We at Social Workline are always looking for registered social workers or experienced unqualified social workers. You will have a social work degree and/or significant experience in social care or supported housing, and we ask for you to be available for at least three months.

We have good client relationships in the local authority, charity, voluntary and social housing sectors - particularly in supported housing and floating/outreach support work.

We at Social Workline pride ourselves in having been voted best agency, in the only NOP survey of its type, by agency workers like you, which we put down to our strong belief in the personal touch – ensuring you are not just an anonymous CV.
